Bank Vault Foils Would-Be Thieves

The sheriff's office said the vault was attacked from front and rear without success. Then the would-be robbers broke into a dance hall above the bank, cut a hole in the hardwood floor and pried off about 12 inches of brick and concrete from the top of the vault with a crowbar. That didn't turn the trick, so they gave up.

Solons Shelve Fair Deal In Korea Crisis

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—The 81st Congress, which convened in noisy argument over peacetime domestic legislation, is about ready to quit in agreement on preparation for war.

The Fair Deal proposals that President Truman tossed into the new Democratic Congress in January, 1949—few of which became law—were all but forgotten in the bipartisan rush to gear for battle with Communism at home and abroad.

Leaders of House and Senate set their adjournment sights for next Wednesday or Thursday. It is possible, however, that the lawmakers will recess only and return after the November elections to consider taxing excess war profits.

Only a few hurdles remained: 1. Control of Communists at home—House and Senate conferees were in virtual agreement on an anti-Red bill so tough that Mr. Truman may veto it. Final passage is certain, and its sponsor has plenty of votes to override a veto.

2. To fight Communism abroad—House and Senate still must agree on final form of an emergency defense appropriation that will boost arms-spending this year by about $17,300,000.

3. Taxes—Awaiting final enactment is a compromise "quickie" tax bill to foot part of the extra arms cost. It would boost personal and corporate taxes by $4,508,000,000, effective October 1. Conferees still need to harmonize a House demand for action on excess profits taxes at this session and the Senate's decision to put this off until next year.

Senate confirmation on General Marshall's nomination as Secretary of Defense is to come, but is expected to be not much more than a formality.

Deputy prosecutor John L. Vogel said Shores was in the office shortly before the money disappeared, to inquire about the whereabouts of a ship.

Shores was arrested by police a short time later. He admitted being in the office but denied taking the money. Bail was set at $3,000.
